A. - To the extent that a list or lists exist, provide that list to INSD with an explanation of the data contained therein. For example, if a field office compiled a list of NSLs issued in Counterintelligence cases, but not Counterterrorism cases, include that explanation. - Field offices are not required to create such lists if they do not exist. - NSLB will provide INSD with the lists that it maintains, which should cover all responsive data. If the field knows of some reason why NSLB's list would not encompass all of its NSLs, an explanation is required. - Should further information be sought by OIG, NSLB will provide information to the field offices to assist in compiling required information. - If no such list exists a negative response is required
B Field offices are not required to create any documents responsive to this request Should field offices be in possession of such documents, they should be provided to INSD. Examples of such documents could be a finding by INSD, after inspection,

	I received one copy of your EC for case which was addressed directly to me.	d d
	I checked with others in my squad to see if the NSL became deteaced and was stuck on one of their leads, but no one has seen it. I waited a couple of days to see if the whole package was going to arrive, but it did not.	b
	Please check with the person who mailed the NSL and EC to make sure that they did not accidently keep the original signature letter. If you find the letter, just put it in the mail with my name on the envelope and I will know what to do. I am keeping the EC set aside to match with the letter when it comes in.
	Thanks,	þ

Attached are electronic copies of the cover EC's that were part of the NSL "package(s)".

When your schedule permits, can you take a look and see if any hard copy NSL's were attached to the EC's that was sent to your Division.

Counterterrorism and General Counsel should have only received the EC's; so if you have any NSL's attached, they may be the originals.

My apologies for any inconvenience caused.
