Here are the actual stats on NSLs, although I am not sure what we can really do with these since they are classified (Chart isn't marked -- but this data is SECRET).

(S) The 30,000 number given by the Post for 2004, as you can see [redacted] [redacted] NSLs for subscriber info alone.

b2 (S) The best number in all this is the "Different USPer" number relative to Toll records [redacted] For the far more intrusive financial data, we issued a total of [redacted] NSLs in 2004, but they affected only [redacted] JSPers.

Valerie,

(S) These charts are classified, though not marked. The master chart breaks out the numbers - for 2004 we had [redacted] NSLs for toll records [redacted] for subscriber records, and [redacted] for financial records.

b1 I am departing to go attend my daughter's choral concert. If you need more information, I will be in on Friday.

A reporter is saying he has a source that says we issue +30,000 NSLs a year. I know the number is classified, but we may try to wave him off if that is wrong. It seems a little high to me.
