the organizer said,
"they were sposed to be two different sections.
one on the greenscare in general, u pdates and education about this repression. and the latt er was going to be specifically focused on supporting activists and prisoners from charges to release. maybe a wee clip in there on grand juries? as fer length... we arent shooting to large here but these are importiant topics so, æ lng as they have to be.
hopefully around a few pages each. we have some folks committed to doing art but that is also up fer grabs if you want it. "

For twenty five years Harold made no contact with the "outside" world. Although a friend of many through correspondence Harold never hugged any of those friends. That's why we were so surprised this summer when a water pipe, or maybe a sneaky, ghost of a fallen anarchist, we grabbed Harold's in warm embrace. For the next hour the three sat around the table sharing stories. we heard the young, Tennessee guard say, "There's no more no-contact booths. Follow me."

I passed by contact rooms eyeing them in wonder, are we going in one of these? The guard opened the door and soon Harold entered from the other side. His bright, clean white shirt matched his shiny hat. His hair was cut clean and his smile bore all his teeth. "Why Hello." Harold's long term friend stood next to me in awe that the three of us were so close, in a room without guards.

No-contact visits are what most maximum security prisoners are allowed. All there loved ones, comrades, and friends are stuck, inches away behind glass and talking into a phone. These kinds of visits were all Harold had had during his stay in the "hate factory gulag."

As always had been in letters Harold mostly asked questions about us and our lives. He was a very humble and curious person. He had a love for story telling and while he could tell a great he spent a great deal of the conversation fishing for some from us. He filled the room with his fair share. Mid sentence he interrupts himself, "Oh and always keep running. I was on a work truck once on in cornfields in Ohio. I was attached to my buddy at the ankle and we had a plan. So the work truck slowed down a bit and we jumped off. When I jumped I twisted my ankle, but we got up and kept runnin.' So there we were running for miles attached at the ankles. We got a good deals away. I was out for sixteen months, but they caught up with me. The thing was that I just had to keep running 'cause otherwise my ankles would have swelled up in the foot cuffs, and hurt like hell."

Harold spoke of being on the lamb in Mexico for several years.
